Anne:

Hope this helps out. Let us know if there's anything else we can do. Also, if the White House has some talking points or other info on this matter, please send them my way. I just want to make sure Mr. Hyde is prepared in case we get press calls on this. Thanks!!

Senate Democrats Must Stop Playing Politics With Judicial Nominations
Hyde: 'Vacancy Crisis Exists in the Federal Judiciary'

(WASHINGTON) May 2, 2002 * Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., today issued the following statement about the dozens of judicial nominations being held captive in the Senate:

There is presently a vacancy crisis in the federal judiciary with almost 90 judicial seats vacant. This is a scandalous situation due solely to the Democrat-dominated Senate's refusal to confirm President Bush's judicial nominations.

There are few functions of government more important than the administration of justice. Judges help ensure that the innocent remain free and that the guilty are punished. It is irresponsible to play politics concerning such important matters. To allow this many judicial seats to remain empty denies swift justice for the American people.

[Background information: To date, President Bush has sent the Senate a record 100 judicial nominations * more than at the same point in any modern administration. However, the Senate has only confirmed 52 of those nominees. Of gravest concern: only 9 of the President's 30 nominees to the Appellate Courts have been confirmed, leaving a 20 percent vacancy rate in what are often the courts of last resort for those whose appeals are turned down by the Supreme Court.]
