An LA times reporter is sniffing around for dissent among the right wing on a Gonzales nomination for the SC. Specifically, he mentioned some meeting in California that Gonzales went to with the right wing that didn't go so well or something along those lines. I told him that 1) I was unaware of such a meeting, 2) however we do not demand that our coalition groups march in lockstep and that discussion of nominees iand their qualifications is commonplace and welcome in our coalition and 3) that until someone actually retires that it is nothing more than a Washington parlor game of speculation and that we have nominees who are actively going through the process now and being filibustered.....can't worry about the SC until the lights flicker on in the press conference room at the Supreme Court.....

But I thought you all would want to know.
