COLORADO BRIEFING

STATE ISSUES

ECONOMY

The unemployment rate in Colorado in October was 4.9 percent, 1.5 percent below a peak of 6.4 percent in July 2003. As of October, the national unemployment rate was 5.0 percent.

REFERENDUMS C AND D

On November 1, Colorado held a special election on referendums relating to the state's Taxpayer Bill of Rights (TABOR). By approving Referendum C, Coloradans suspended TABOR for five years, allowing the state to keep approximately $3.1 billion in revenue, which would have otherwise been refunded to taxpayers. By rejecting Referendum D, voters barred the state from borrowing against those funds to pay for infrastructure and education programs.

Governor Bill Owens (R) called the election as part of a bipartisan budget compromise between his administration and Colorado's Democrat-controlled House and Senate. Although TABOR checked overall spending, education costs increased due to a constitutional mandate requiring education spending to grow irrespective of TABOR limits; the result is a permanent deficit.

In the aftermath of the special election, which had dominated state politics and exposed divisions between Republican leaders and party activists for months, Colorado is experiencing relative political calm. By approving one referendum and rejecting the other, Colorado voters gave both sides an opportunity to claim a victory. Republican leaders – who largely supported suspending TABOR – are now working to rebuild Party unity by reaching out to fiscal conservatives.

JUDGE SAMUEL ALITO

Senator Ken Salazar (D) expressed “grave concern” about Judge Samuel Alito after meeting with the Supreme Court nominee on November 17. Although he was elected as a “conservative Democrat,” Salazar has moved to the left since taking office. Salazar says he does not yet know whether he will vote to confirm Alito, but he also said he does not foresee participating in a filibuster to block the nomination. Salazar voted to confirm Chief Justice John Roberts.

COLORADO BRIEFING

IMMIGRATION

Conservative Republican lawmakers are considering legislation to fight what they see as the causes and effects of illegal immigration. Among the measures they are considering: requiring local police to record the residency and employment status of people they arrest; conditioning the issuance of Colorado business licenses on prospective owners making “legal workers only” pledges; a mandatory status check for all state hires; and a ban on state contracts for companies that do not ensure that they hire only legal workers.

Anti-illegal immigration activists will begin collecting signatures in January for a November 2006 ballot question asking voters to require residency checks of all applicants for state services.

TEXAS BRIEFING

ECONOMY

As of October 2005, Texas' unemployment rate was 5.2 percent, 1.6 percent below a peak of 6.8 percent in August 2003. The national unemployment rate for October was 5.0 percent.

TOM DELAY INDICTMENT

On November 1, Judge Bob Perkins was removed from Congressman Tom DeLay's (R, TX-22) case because of his contributions to Democratic candidates and MoveOn.org. He was replaced with retired Judge Pat Priest from San Antonio. At a hearing on November 22 to consider requests to drop the charges against DeLay, Judge Priest indicated that he would take at least two weeks to consider the arguments and that if the case goes to trial, it would likely not begin until early next year. DeLay's attorneys are also requesting that the trial be moved out of left-leaning Travis County. DeLay was indicted on October 3 on charges of illegally laundering corporate money to Republican candidates in the 2002 elections in Texas, adding to a conspiracy charge handed down less than a week earlier.

HURRICANE KATRINA

In the wake of Hurricane Katrina, Governor Rick Perry (R) opened the doors of the Houston Astrodome and Reliant Stadium to 25,000 evacuees. As more evacuees poured into the state, Perry enacted an emergency plan, opening shelters in San Antonio and Dallas. It is estimated that by September 5, Texas was housing 139,000 hurricane victims in official shelters and 90,000 in hotels and private homes. On September 6, Perry declared a state of emergency and asked neighboring states for assistance in housing evacuees.

Texas continues to shelter tens of thousands of evacuees, many of whom are rebuilding and resuming their lives in Houston and Dallas rather than moving back to their original homes. Lieutenant Governor David Dewhurst (R) predicts that the state will absorb an extra $1.4 billion of health care and education costs by next summer.

HURRICANE RITA

On September 24, Hurricane Rita struck the southeast corner of Texas, making landfall just east of Sabine Pass. Although people fled several cities, including Houston and Galveston, the Category 3 storm was much weaker than expected. The greatest effects of the hurricane were power outages and wind damage; nine counties around the Beaumont area were declared disaster areas, and power was out for six weeks in some cities. No major refining and shipping capacities reported any long-term damage.

TEXAS BRIEFING

NO SOLUTION TO SCHOOL FINANCE PROBLEM

On November 22, the Texas Supreme Court handed down a ruling affirming a lower court's decision that the State's school finance system is unconstitutional. Under the system, local property taxes are used to pay for public schools; because these taxes are so widespread, the Court ruled that they amount to an unconstitutional statewide property tax. Governor Perry has named former State Comptroller John Sharp (D) to head a commission charged with restructuring the tax system; this commission must meet a June 1, 2006, deadline set by the State Supreme Court.

TEXAS BECOMES A MAJORITY-MINORITY STATE

The U.S. Census Bureau announced in August that Texas has become the fourth state to have a non-white majority population. According to estimates based on the 2000 Census, 50.2 percent of the state's population are minorities. The surging number of Hispanics accounts for the change, and the Hispanic population will continue to grow in coming years. Some estimates predict that by the year 2030, every major city in Texas will have a Hispanic majority. The other majority-minority states are Hawaii, California, and New Mexico.

TEXAS BRIEFING

b(6)

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT BANNING SAME-SEX MARRIAGE

On November 8, 76 percent of Texans voted in favor of a Constitutional amendment banning same-sex marriage. While the Defense of Marriage Act of 2003 already defined marriage as a union between a man and a woman, this amendment ensures that the legislation cannot be overturned by the courts. The overwhelming success of the amendment is attributed to two traditionally Democratic groups – Hispanics and African-Americans – crossing party lines to vote in its favor. Governor Perry strongly supported this amendment.
