KENTUCKY BRIEFING

POLITICAL CLIMATE

KENTUCKY POLLING

In a poll released on February 9, Kentucky residents gave you a 63 percent job approval rating.¹

STATE BUDGET

Governor Ernie Fletcher (R) proposed a $14.9 billion, two-year state budget, in which spending is cut by 2.5 percent and $68 million in special Federal relief money and $54 million from the state's Rainy Day fund is utilized. This proposed budget would cut the state's expected budget deficit for FY 2005 [?] – currently estimated at $710 million – by $100 million. Governor Fletcher's plan includes cutting the number of Cabinet agencies from 14 to eight, cutting $6.9 million from elementary and secondary school grant programs, requiring state employees to pay more for health care coverage, and cutting $65.8 million from state universities. Fletcher also wants state parks to become more productive; they have been operating with a deficit of $29 million per year.

Governor Fletcher amended his budget proposal on February 4 and 16 to include $50.3 million more for education. These funds were gained by refinancing state bonds at lower interest rates and cutting the amount put into personal health care accounts for state employees. On March 9, State House Democrats passed their own version of the budget, adding $312 million to the budget, including $260 million for education. The main difference between the two budgets is that the House Democrats' version has a larger pay increase for teachers and state employees. Democrats fought 42 amendments to the bill by Republicans before a motion was passed to block consideration of any more amendments. Under the Democrat proposal, the State would borrow heavily to finance the budget. Republicans argue that the Democrats' budget would put Kentucky $1.4 billion in debt and does not address the Medicaid shortfall. The Republican-controlled Senate will now consider the bill, with any differences between the two versions worked out in a conference committee.

TAX REFORM

Governor Fletcher announced a tax modernization plan on March 11. The plan is "revenue neutral," meaning that in the first year, the revenues from added taxes will make up for the losses from tax cuts. The plan could start generating profits and creating jobs as early as the 2005 fiscal year. Governor Fletcher is proposing a 26-cent rise in the state cigarette tax, a 7.62 percent communications tax, an increase in the liquor tax, and a statewide lodging tax. He also wants to lower the rate on the top income bracket from 6 percent to 5.68 percent, exempt 125,000 low-income residents from taxes altogether, and reduce taxes on corporations.

Governor Fletcher will attempt to have the Legislature pass his package before the Legislature adjourns on March 31. Democrat State Representative Bob Damron is a sponsor of the bill, and the House Democrat leadership is upset that Damron and eleven other Democrats helped Fletcher draft the plan. There is some doubt whether there will be enough time to get the bill through the House by the end of the session. The bill was heard before the House Appropriations and Revenue Committee on March 16. To soothe Legislators worried about raising taxes, Fletcher said that he would not support any Republican candidate that exploited a Democrat's vote for the budget bill but added that he would look at each race individually before deciding whether to support a candidate.

MEDICAID MODERNIZATION PLAN

Governor Fletcher announced a Medicaid modernization plan on January 30. The plan attempts to improve care management, benefit management, and technology. The Medicaid program provides health care services to 673,000 Kentuckians and has an annual budget of nearly $4 billion. On February 11, Medicaid officials announced they would cut costs by hiring a private company to teach people how to manage the symptoms of diseases like asthma and diabetes. Effective management is expected to lower the amount paid for expensive services like emergency room visits. Officials are also considering hiring a private company to help manage pharmacy benefits.

READ TO ACHIEVE

Governor Fletcher supported State Senator Dan Kelly (R) on January 15 when Kelly announced his Read to Achieve Act of 2004. The Read to Achieve initiative is intended to help every child read by third grade through expanded elementary school reading programs and state assistance for struggling students. The Senate passed the Read to Achieve Act on February 4, and the bill went to the House for approval. The program faces an uncertain future, as it was cut in the budget passed by the House on March 9.

TORT REFORM

A medical malpractice reform bill being considered by the State House would allow voters to decide if future sessions of the General Assembly can limit monetary damages for pain and suffering (the limit may not be less than $250,000), impose a time limit for filing malpractice claims, and create a mandatory alternative dispute resolution system.

KENTUCKY BRIEFING

If this bill is passed, the amendment would appear on the November ballot. The State Senate passed this bill in January.

Governor Fletcher, who supports the measure, has said it will lower health care costs in Kentucky. State House Democrats have proposed an alternative plan, which would create a state-run insurance company from which doctors could purchase malpractice coverage. The bill has passed the House and may be heard by the State Senate soon. Lawmakers are looking for a compromise in which each chamber passes the other's bill.

FETAL HOMICIDE LEGISLATION

On February 19, the State Senate passed legislation making it a crime to harm a fetus in the womb. The maximum penalty is life in prison without parole. The bill, already passed by the State House, was sent to Governor Fletcher, who signed it into law on February 20.

SAME-SEX MARRIAGE

Proposals for a state constitutional amendment defining marriage as between a man and a woman were introduced in the State House and Senate on February 26. The Senate version would also allow the State to ignore civil unions performed elsewhere. Both proposals were introduced by Republicans one day after a similar proposal in the State House, sponsored by a Democrat, was withdrawn. The Senate version was passed on March 11, and is waiting for approval from the House.

On March 2, the Kentucky State House approved a resolution urging Congress to send a proposed Constitutional Amendment to the states for ratification that defines marriage as between one man and one woman. The resolution is now before the State Senate.
