I am pleased to send warm greetings to those attending the Judicial Conference of the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

In 1982, President Ronald Reagan signed into law the Federal Courts Improvement Act, creating the Federal Circuit to hear appeals based on legally defined subject-matter jurisdiction. For the last 20 years, this specialized court has promoted uniformity and stability in vital and complex areas of the law, while lessening the burden on the twelve geographically based courts of appeal. Today, the Federal Circuit has national jurisdiction over appeals involving a variety of specialized bodies of law.

On the Court's 20th anniversary, I commend those whose dedication and hard work make the Federal Circuit an invaluable part of our judicial system. Your efforts help the court achieve its mission and contribute to the fair and impartial resolution of disputes. Best wishes for a successful event.

DOT draft

The Honorable Haldane Robert Mayer
United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit
Washington, DC 20439

Dear Chief Judge Mayer:

I am pleased to forward my greetings to those attending the Judicial Conference of the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

It has been twenty years since President Ronald Reagan signed into law the Federal Courts Improvement Act, which created the Federal Circuit. In 1982, the concept of creating a court whose jurisdiction to hear appeals was based on subject matter, instead of the district court in which the original case had been filed, was new. The hope was that this specialized court would promote uniformity and stability in vital and complex areas of the law, while easing the burden on the twelve geographically based courts of appeal. Since its inception, the Federal Circuit has fulfilled that hope. Over time, Congress has seen fit to expand the jurisdiction of this court. Today this unique court has a national jurisdiction over appeals involving such specialized bodies of law as intellectual property, government contracts, international trade, veterans, and taxes.

I offer my sincere congratulations to all those who have made the Federal Circuit a success. From the court employees who run the day-to-day business of the court to the honorable judges who preside over its courtrooms. And from the most experienced litigator to the lowliest law clerk. Each of you has helped the court achieve its mission and contribute to the fair, impartial, and peaceful resolution of disputes in a civilized society.

I welcome you and join you in your salute to the Federal Circuit.

Sincerely,

John Ashcroft

Dear Misty:

On behalf of the court, I request that the President send a letter recognizing the 20th Anniversary of the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit at its Judicial Conference. The Conference will be held on April 8, 2002, at the Grand Hyatt Hotel in Washington. It typically has 1,000 to 1,500 judges, senior government officials, government lawyers, private practitioners, and academics from across the country in attendance. We may have a larger number of attendees for this conference because it commemorates the 20th anniversary of the founding of the court.

The court was created by the Federal Courts Improvement Act of 1982, which President Reagan signed into law. It has national jurisdiction over appeals involving intellectual property, government contracts, international trade, federal employees, veterans, taxes, and takings arising under the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution. In the past, our speakers have included Chief Justice Burger, Vice President Quayle, and Justice Scalia. Chief Justice Rehnquist and Solicitor General Olson have agreed to speak at this conference.

I have taken the liberty of enclosing a suggested draft of a Presidential message. If a message is forthcoming and is to be read at the Conference by a Presidential representative, the requested due date is April 8. In that regard, I have approached Tim Flanigan, Deputy Counsel to the President. If not, we would request that it be provided by April 2 so that we might reproduce it for the attendees. If you need further information about the Conference or the court feel free to call Ms. Pam Twiford at (202) 312-5522 or me at (202) 633-6556. Thank you for your consideration of this request.

Sincerely yours,

H. R. Mayer

SUGGESTED DRAFT

April 8, 2002

I am very pleased to forward my best wishes to those attending the Judicial Conference of the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit in this year of the court's twentieth anniversary.

On April 2, 1982, in a rose garden ceremony at the White House, President Reagan signed into law the Federal Courts Improvement Act. The Act created the Federal Circuit from the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals and the United States Court of Claims, putting the new, replacement court into effect on October 1 of that year. Unlike its twelve sister circuit courts of appeals, the new court was to have national subject matter, not geographic, jurisdiction. That jurisdiction was a combination of jurisdiction inherited from its two predecessor courts and other, new areas initially given to it by Congress. The jurisdiction was to be of a civil -- not criminal -- nature, would often involve potentially large damage awards and a variety of economic issues, and would cover diverse areas such as patent law, international trade, and suits against the federal government. The hope twenty years ago was that the court would promote uniformity and stability in vital areas of the law and ease the burden on other federal courts. Since its inception, not only has the new court fulfilled that hope, but Congress has seen fit to give it important additional jurisdiction, including appeals concerning the rights of our nation's veterans.

My congratulations to all those who have made the Federal Circuit a success, from those who conceived it to the court employees who have implemented its daily operations, from past judges to present judges, from attorneys who have litigated before it to scholars and others who have commented upon it. You have all helped the court achieve its mission and contribute to a vital judicial role -- the fair, impartial, and peaceful resolution of disputes in a civilized society.

For that, and for your two decades of serving the public interest, I thank you on behalf of all Americans. Keep up the good work!
